

Invited Presentations

Rumelhart Prize Lecture

Dedre Gentner, Northwestern University

Why we're so smart: Analogical processing and relational representation

Friday, August 12, 4:45pm

Terrace Ballroom 4

Rumelhart Prize Symposium

The Symposium in Honor of Dedre Gentner

Panelists:

Kenneth Forbus, Northwestern University

Micah Goldwater, University of Sydney

Kenneth Kurtz, Binghamton University

Stella Christie, Swarthmore College

Jeffrey Loewenstein, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign

Arthur Markman, University of Texas, Austin

Friday, 12 August, 10:30am

Room 126A

Thursday's Keynote

Brian Scholl, Yale University

Let's see what happens: Dynamic events as foundational units of perception and cognition

Thursday, August 11, 9:00am

Terrace Ballroom 4

Friday's Keynote

Jeffrey Zacks, Washington University, St. Louis

Event comprehension and memory in the predictive brain

Friday, August 12, 9:00am

Terrace Ballroom 4

Saturday's Keynote

Amanda Woodward, University of Chicago

Putting the action back into infant cognition

Saturday, August 13, 9:00am

Terrace Ballroom 4

Invited Symposia

Invited Symposium 1: Representing events in vision, language and action

Organizer and Moderator: John Trueswell, University of Pennsylvania

Panelists:

John Aloimonos, University of Maryland

Gerry Altmann, University of Connecticut

Dare Baldwin, University of Oregon

Marina Bedny, Johns Hopkins University

Thursday, August 11, 10:30am

Invited Symposium 2: Causal Reasoning: Origins and Development

Organizer and Moderator: Anna Papafragou, University of Delaware

Panelists:

Elizabeth Bonawitz, Rutgers University, Newark

Gergely Csibra, Central European University

Frank Keil, Yale University

L.A. Paul, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Saturday, August 13, 10:30am